The objective of this visit was to facilitate the students to know and understand the real, multicultural heritage and reach out for information beyond the textbook.

With excitement mounting, the students commenced their journey. The first stop was the Red Fort , regarded as the crown of India's heritage. The students were struck by the breathtaking and intricate architecture of the magnificent red sandstone structure.

The next destination was the Rashtrapati Bhavan Museum which showcased the collection of relics associated with former Presidents of India.

Next halt was the Indira Gandhi National Museum, the residence of the former Prime Minister of India. The children witnessed the collection of rare photographs of the Nationalist Movements and the personal moments of the Nehru - Gandhi family. The curiosity of the children could be seen by the number of queries they had.

While the purpose of the trip was to promote learning through outdoor interaction and experiences and to instill a sense of appreciation for India's varied heritage, it turned out to be an excursion full of fun, discovery, information and knowledge.
